Fair Housing Conference 2018: Past Accomplishments, Future Challenges

Celebrating 50 Years of the passage of the Fair Housing Act

Presented by
Fair Housing Advocates of Northern California
Why do we need the Fair Housing Act? Looking back 50 years...

“President Johnson, who had considered the 1966 housing bill his most devastating political defeat, did not back down. In the summer of 1967, Mondale called a black veteran to testify. Decorated for his service in Vietnam, Carlos Campbell had been appointed to a job in the Pentagon. Standing rigid in a crisp white uniform, he told the Senate housing and urban affairs subcommittee how he and his wife were unable to rent an apartment in the white neighborhoods near his new post in Arlington, VA, even with the help of the Defense Department’s housing office.

“Up until the spring of 1965 I was largely convinced that our racial problems were rapidly diminishing, and that education, professional credibility, and financial integrity were the necessary vehicles for obtaining full rights as a citizen,” Campbell said. Once off the military base, he said, he’d been forced to “re-examine my philosophy.” The man who had, in his own words, been entrusted with “safeguarding the nation’s most delicate secrets” told senators that he had been turned away from more than 36 apartments because of his race.*

And still, Congress refused to pass the Fair Housing Act, until almost a year later. On April 4, 1968, Rev. Martin Luther King, Jr. was assassinated; 125 cities erupted in riots, with 70,000 military and National Guardsmen deployed in 29 states. President Johnson signed the Fair Housing Act a week later. The bill was an attempt to address racial segregation and discrimination.

Recent local stories underscore the necessity of the Fair Housing Act today...

It has been 50 years since the passage of the federal Fair Housing Act. While discrimination today is usually more covert – often done with a smile and handshake – we continue to receive complaints related to race, as well as other forms of discrimination. FHANC recently received a complaint from an African-American renter whose housing provider told her, upon moving in, that her neighbors would be upset with her for renting to an African-American tenant. This landlord began harassing the tenant, and following a dispute about rent, placed a sign in her window: “Black Section 8 Tenant – Shameless [tenant's name].”

In another case, FHANC conducted a two-part investigation at a property in Marin, using callers with racially-identifiable voices. In both instances, the housing provider refused to schedule a private appointment with the African-American callers; however, when speaking with Caucasian callers just hours later, he agreed to meet without question and offered a lower security deposit.

These examples provide a glimpse into the kind of work still required – 50 years later – to continue the fight for equal housing opportunity.

 Under the federal Fair Housing Act, it is illegal to discriminate against people on the basis of their race, color, religion, national origin, gender, family status, or disability. There are additional protections under California’s fair housing laws.

Featured Speakers

George Lipsitz is Professor of Black Studies and Sociology at the University of California, Santa Barbara. His publications include How Racism Takes Place (2011), The Possessive Investment in Whiteness (2006), and A Life in the Struggle (1995). Mr. Lipsitz is senior editor of the comparative and relational ethnic studies journal Kalfou, editor of the Insubordinate Spaces series at Temple University Press and co-editor of the American Crossroads series at the University of California Press. He won the American Studies Association Angela Y. Davis Prize for Public Scholarship in 2013 and the Bode-Pearson Prize for Career Distinction in 2016. Mr. Lipsitz is chair of the board of directors of the African American Policy Forum, chair of the Advisory Board at the Center for Black Studies Research (Santa Barbara), and chair of the board of directors of the Woodstock Institute.

James Perry is President and CEO of the Winston-Salem Urban League. Mr. Perry manages a 200-person team across the state of North Carolina, advocating for socio-economic opportunities, wellness, affordable housing, voting rights and food security for diverse communities. Before coming to the Urban League, Mr. Perry served for 10 years as the CEO of the Greater New Orleans Fair Housing Action Center. He led the Center through hurricane Katrina, the most disastrous hurricane to make landfall in America. Under his leadership, the Center obtained more than half a billion dollars in settlements and court victories on behalf of victims of housing discrimination. Mr. Perry founded the Mississippi Gulf Coast Fair Housing Center, was a candidate in the 2010 New Orleans mayor’s race and has testified before Congress eight times. He has served on New Orleans’ Historic District Landmark Commission, the National Low Income Housing Coalition board of directors and chaired the Louisiana Housing Alliance board of directors. He currently serves on the National Fair Housing Alliance board of directors. Mr. Perry is a political science graduate of the University of New Orleans and a graduate of the Loyola University School of Law. Mr. Perry, his wife Melissa, and their two daughters split their time between New Orleans, New York City and Winston-Salem.

Panelists

Chancela Al-Mansour is the Executive Director of Housing Rights Center. Ms. Al-Mansour is a nationally known fair housing attorney and civil rights expert with more than 25 years of experience. In 2010, she joined the Housing Rights Center (HRC), the largest and oldest fair housing council in the nation. Before HRC, Ms. Al-Mansour served low-income communities for 16 years as a Directing Attorney at Neighborhood Legal Services of Los Angeles County where she supervised the HPRP (homeless prevention) work with L.A. City and L.A. County and litigated hundreds of cases involving landlord-tenant, housing element, and mortgage fraud. Ms. Al-Mansour has extensive experience litigating fair housing cases involving familial status, disability and race, producing training and resource materials, and as a fair housing law trainer. In private practice, she and her former law partner filed the landmark Roommates.com case, and litigated cases involving predatory lending and fraudulent mortgage broker practices. She was also the Earl Johnson Law Fellow at the Western Center on Law and Poverty. She served as President of the Fair Housing Congress of Southern California, and currently serves on the boards of the California Reinvestment Coalition (CRC) and the National Fair Housing Alliance (NFHA). She graduated from Vassar College and University of California at Davis School of Law.

Brian Colbert was elected to the San Anselmo Town Council in November 2017. He serves the entire community - a beautiful town with a population of approximately 13,000 in Marin County - while focusing on connecting families to the political process and economic vitality. Prior to serving in public office, Mr. Colbert studied political science and theater at Oberlin College before earning a law degree from the University of Chicago Law School, and a Master’s degree from the University of Chicago Harris School of Public Policy. For five years, he was a corporate attorney on Wall Street before pursuing more entrepreneurial endeavors. After living abroad in Turkey for a few years, Mr. Colbert and his wife moved to San Anselmo. He soon became chair of the San Anselmo Economic Development Committee. He is currently Commissioner for the Transportation Authority of Marin, as well as, the liaison to Ross Valley School District, San Anselmo Chamber of Commerce, and Economic Development Committee.
Sandhya Dirks is an Enterprise Reporter at KQED Public Radio in the Bay Area. She is the co-creator and co-host of American Suburb, a podcast about the flip side of gentrification and the transformation of suburbia. She also hosted and produced Q’ed Up, when it was KQED’s signature documentary podcast. Currently she is working on Season 2 of American Suburb, and reporting on race, equity, and housing. Ms. Dirks lives in Oakland with her two cats.

Rachel Ginis’ anthropology degree focused on global housing patterns. Her advocacy efforts and career as a LEED accredited residential designer and general contractor concentrated her efforts to create more sustainable housing practices, responding to changing social patterns, climate change, and resource limitations. It was, however, a life changing event that led her to develop an innovative model for flexible infill housing that offers a more affordable housing option to both homeowners and renters, and founded the nonprofit, Lilypad Homes, which helped facilitate the development of accessory dwelling units (ADUs). Ms. Ginis realizes that policy is a crucial component in the shift to sustainable practices. She has become a strong advocate for sustainability at the local, state, and federal level, and successfully lobbied to establish her flexible housing model, known as junior accessory dwelling units (JADUs), in local permitting code and California State law. She hopes to create greater equity and opportunity in housing for workers across all income levels, to foster more resilient, sustainable communities that are better equipped to meet the challenges of the 21st century.

Salimah Hankins is a Senior Staff Attorney at Community Legal Services in East Palo Alto where she works on anti-displacement issues and employs a community lawyering approach to legal representation. Before this, Ms. Hankins served as a Fair Housing Attorney at the American Civil Liberties Union (ACLU) of Maryland where she advocated for and represented people of color experiencing racial discrimination in Baltimore public housing. Prior to, and during law school, she served as a community organizer for MAS Boston, Inc. - a civil and human rights advocacy organization. Additionally, Ms. Hankins has served as a Human Rights Consultant for the U.S. Human Rights Network (USHRN) in Geneva, Switzerland, where she advised U.S. grassroots groups on their human rights advocacy efforts before various United Nations treaty-bodies. She has also authored five comprehensive human rights reports for USHRN. She received her undergraduate degree from Northeastern University and her law degree from Suffolk University Law School in Boston.

Madeline Howard is a Senior Staff Attorney at Western Center on Law & Poverty focusing on fair housing litigation, unlawful detainer appeals, and issues impacting tenants in foreclosed homes. Before joining Western Center in 2013, Ms. Howard was a senior staff attorney with Bay Area Legal Aid in San Jose and San Francisco where she represented the interests of low-income tenants against landlords and major lending institutions. At Western Center, Ms. Howard partners with legal services attorneys on impact litigation to challenge discriminatory housing practices and preserve affordable housing. She also supports direct services attorneys through technical assistance and training on issues ranging from unlawful detainer appeals to fair housing rights. She received her law degree from Berkeley after working as an advocate at Medical-Legal Partnership Boston, the nation’s first medical-legal collaborative. She went on to become a research attorney at San Francisco Superior Court before returning to direct services work.

Kiki La Porta provides strategy, branding, advertising and design for businesses, agencies, and nonprofits. Her pro bono activities are dedicated to the environment, social justice, and affordable housing. She is a board director of Sustainable Marin, founding member of the Coalition for a Livable Marin (CALM), and an advisory board member of the Marin Environmental Housing Collaborative (MEHC). Ms. La Porta’s personal and professional focus is promoting environmental, economic, and social sustainability, and addressing social problems through wise public policy, socially responsible business, and conscious everyday decision-making.
Christina Livingston is the Executive Director of the Alliance of Californians for Community Empowerment (ACCE). She has been organizing since 2004 when she was brought on as a field organizer for Los Angeles ACORN. There she worked hands on with community members in South LA and Watts, developing leaders and organizing local campaigns to improve community conditions. She later became the Field Director for California ACORN. In 2010 Ms. Livingston helped form ACCE and later the ACCE Institute where she worked for 2 years as Statewide Deputy Director before becoming Executive Director. In her organizing career Ms. Livingston has worked on campaigns that addressed equitable infrastructure investment, progressive revenue solutions, housing equity, access to high quality and well-funded public services, corporate accountability, good government, representative voter engagement, and criminal justice. She views her work from the intersection of racial and economic impacts and is passionate about increasing the voices of people of color, poor folks, and women. She graduated from the University of California, Berkeley in 2004 with a B.A. in Sociology. In 2008 she received her M.A. in Sociology from California State University, Los Angeles.

Melissa Morris is a Staff Attorney at Public Interest Law Project, where her practice includes impact litigation, policy advocacy, and technical assistance and training to local legal services programs regarding housing and public benefits. Prior to joining PILP, Ms. Morris worked for 12 years at the Law Foundation of Silicon Valley. At the Law Foundation, Ms. Morris engaged in direct client representation, impact litigation, and policy advocacy regarding housing, public benefits, voting rights, consumer issues, and the rights of people with disabilities in institutional settings. Much of her work at the Law Foundation focused on preventing the displacement of low-income tenants and communities of color from Silicon Valley; this work included supervising the Law Foundation’s Housing Rights Unit, representing individuals, families, and resident groups at risk of displacement in court and administrative proceedings, advocating for state and local policies designed to prevent displacement and increase the supply of affordable housing. She began her legal career in 2004 as a Borchard Foundation Center on Law & Aging Fellow at Legal Aid of Marin, where she represented low-income and senior residents of Marin County in housing, domestic violence, elder abuse, and consumer matters.

Hugh E. Rowden is Head of Mortgage Market Outreach & Community Relations Leader, Senior Vice President of Wells Fargo & Company. As the Director of Mortgage Market Outreach, Mr. Rowden is responsible for leading the company’s mortgage outreach strategy. He oversees community relations outreach initiatives and collaboration with national & local housing counseling agencies and legal aids in support of homeownership education and home preservation efforts. His team focuses on helping customers and communities in markets of greatest needs by reducing financial and brand reputation risk. Additionally, he is the interim Central Region - Community Relations Leader managing both the local Wells Fargo foundation giving and community development activities. Mr. Rowden’s previous roles with Wells Fargo include local government relations Regional Director, Mortgage Servicing Outreach Director and Retail Mortgage Sales Manager for the Southeast Region. He attended the University of Northern Colorado for his undergraduate degree, the University of Arkansas Sam M. Walton School of Business for Middle Management Leadership Development, and Executive MBA from Mercer University at The Eugene W. Stetson School of Business and Economics.

Lisa Sitkin is a Senior Staff Attorney at National Housing Law Project (NHLP) in San Francisco, CA, where she engages in policy advocacy on behalf of low-income homeowners and renters, and provides consultation, technical assistance and practice resources in connection with mortgages and foreclosures; housing challenges for those reentering society after incarceration; and tenants’ rights and benefits relating to energy efficiency and utility costs. She has been practicing law since 1997. Prior to joining NHLP, Ms. Sitkin was a Managing Attorney at Housing and Economic Rights Advocates in Oakland, CA. She has conducted numerous workshops and trainings regarding mortgages, foreclosures, loan modification and foreclosure rescue scams, including programs produced by the Practicing Law Institute and the National Consumer Law Center, and has testified before the California State Legislature and other governmental bodies regarding mortgage servicing and foreclosure issues. She is one of the original drafters of the bill that ultimately became the California Homeowner Bill of Rights.

Presenters’ Biographies

David Levin is Managing Attorney at Legal Aid of Marin where he focuses on housing matters, including eviction cases and public housing issues. Previously, Mr. Levin served as Director of the Fair Housing Initiatives Program at Bay Area Legal Aid for several years, and he defended tenants in several hundred eviction cases and housing authority matters. Legal Aid of Marin assists low-income clients with family law, housing, and employment issues. Mr. Levin has worked for more than ten years in a wide variety of fair housing issues. These cases included a range of issues on behalf of clients, and many were successfully settled, or conciliated with assistance from HUD or DFEH, but in some cases Mr. Levin filed affirmative fair housing claims in state and federal court. Prior to his legal aid work, Mr. Levin practiced commercial litigation for several years. He is a graduate of New York University Law School, and served as a law clerk in federal district court. Mr. Levin is admitted to the state bar in California and New York.

Johnathan Logan joined Marin Community Foundation (MCF) in early 2016, initially in the role of Special Assistant to the President, and soon after segueing to Vice President for Community Engagement. He brings a wide range of skills, with 11 years of local government and community development leadership experience. He has served on various non-profit and local government boards and commissions. Mr. Logan is a National Urban Fellow and holds a Bachelor of Science degree in Business Management and a Master's degree in Public Administration from City University of New York.

Kevin Stein is Deputy Director of the California Reinvestment Coalition (CRC). CRC is a statewide membership organization of more than three hundred nonprofit organizations and public agencies that advocates with financial institutions for increased lending, investment, and financial services to low income communities and communities of color. At CRC, Mr. Stein works on banking, housing and small business issues, including efforts to fight predatory mortgage lending and foreclosure through negotiation with banks, regulatory and legislative advocacy, public education, support for local initiatives, and action research. Mr. Stein is the primary author of several CRC reports relating to subprime lending, foreclosure, loan modification, and access to credit for small businesses. Before coming to CRC, Mr. Stein was Supervising Attorney at the East Palo Alto Community Law Project and Lecturer in Law at Stanford Law School, working on community economic development issues. Prior to that, he worked at HomeBase, a law and social policy center on homelessness. Mr. Stein is a graduate of the Georgetown University Law Center, and Stanford University. He currently sits on the board of directors of the Mission Economic Development Agency (MEDA) and the National Community Reinvestment Coalition (NCRC), and was a member of the Federal Reserve Board's Consumer Advisory Council in 2012.

Leelee Thomas leads the Marin County Community Development Agency’s Housing and Federal Grants Division. She develops affordable housing policy within the unincorporated area of the County, and oversees the program which provides federal funds for affordable housing and local services. She oversees implementation and monitoring of the Housing Element of the Countywide Plan, the Housing Trust Fund, and facilitation and funding of affordable housing projects. Ms. Thomas represents the County in a number of venues related to housing.
